LOAN OVERVIEW

YES NO

Do you need to review the terms of your loans, and whether they are federal or private loans?
Are you currently in school? If so, you are likely not required to make payments as long as you are enrolled at least half-time.

Did you recently graduate and are you in a grace period? If so, consider the benefits of starting repayment before the end of the grace period (starting the loan forgiveness clock), and whether consolidation/refinancing would benefit you.
Is your employment status changing or are you changing careers? If so, consider how your new position, hours, and salary might impact your student loans. Your career move could affect your payments and eligibility for profession-based relief.
Are you the cosigner of a loan for a family member? If so, consider the following:

- Ensure that the borrower is making timely payments (late payments affect your credit score), and pursue available options for release, when applicable.
- Maintain a copy of your note, and understand the terms and any triggering events that may accelerate payments.

Are you in repayment and struggling to make payments? If so,
consider the following:

- Understand your status and the repercussions of delinquency and default across your various loans.
- Relief measures may be available from your lender (e.g. deferment, forbearance). Understand the downside of these options, as they may increase your overall interest payment.
- If you have a 529 account, you can withdraw up to $10,000 (lifetime limit) for payments toward qualified student loans. (continue on next column)

Are you in repayment and looking to pay your debt on an accelerated schedule? If so, consider the following:

- Review loan features to help you prioritize your extra payments, directing them away from loans with the most favorable features (e.g. forgiveness).
- Ensure that extra payments are going towards principal, and don't cause unintended effects. Note that if extra payments push you into "paid ahead status," future payments may not be "qualified payments" for PSLF.

Does your employer offer repayment benefits?

Do you need a contingency plan, in case you have a disruption in income? If so, consider increasing your emergency fund savings, in order to cover several months of loan payments and avoid potential delinquency and default.
Do you expect your income to rise in the future? If so, consider if a graduated plan makes more sense.

LOAN REPAYMENT FEATURE ISSUES

Do you have federal loans? If so, you may be eligible for IDR plans. See flowchart "Am I Eligible For An IDR Plan For My Federal Student Loans?" for details.
Are you a teacher, nurse, doctor, military service member, or lawyer? If so, you may qualify for repayment assistance programs.
Are you an IDR borrower and public service employee (e.g. government or 501(c)(3))? If so, you may qualify for loan forgiveness if you make 120 qualifying payments while working full-time, through PSLF. Review your circumstances to accurately determine your eligibility and status.
Have you declared bankruptcy, or have become permanently disabled? If so, your federal loans could be discharged.
Do you have Perkins loans and are you a teacher, firefighter, law enforcement, nurse or military service member? If so, the Perkins loans may qualify for cancellation.

LOAN CONSOLIDATION & REFINANCING ISSUES

Are your rates variable or do they seem high? If so, you may benefit from refinancing at a lower, fixed rate. Be mindful of loan features that you may give up if you refinance.
Do you have federal student loans? If so, consider the following:

- Your federal loans can be consolidated, but your origination date, loan status, and financial position may affect your eligibility for various consolidation options. Carefully consider the timing and any benefits of consolidating before taking this step.
- Your federal loans can be refinanced into private loans, often at lower rates, but be aware of the federal benefits you might sacrifice by private refinancing (e.g. IDR plans, interest subsidy, forgiveness, etc.).
- If you follow an IDR schedule, your monthly payments will be tied to your income (typically ranging from $10 \%$ to $20 \%$ of your discretionary income), updated annually. If you make regular timely payments for a term of years (typically 20-25), your remaining loan may be forgiven. Carefully consider the timing and any benefits of consolidating before taking this step.
Do you have private student loans? If so, consider the following:
- You can refinance your private student loans, and combine any federal student loans that you may have. Remember that private refinance of federal loans irrevocably forfeits any exclusively federal benefits.
- Lenders will review your credit score, income, and debt-to-income ratio, and may require a cosigner for approval.
- When comparing lenders, weigh features such as fees/costs, unemployment protection, cosigner release, repayment options, etc.

TAX ISSUES

Is your MAGI less than $$ 85,000$ if you are a single filer, or $$ 170,000$ if you are MFJ? If so, you may qualify for an above-the-line income tax deduction for interest paid on "qualified education loans" (for you, your spouse, your dependent), up to a maximum of $$ 2,500$ per tax year. Phaseouts begin at $$ 70,000$ MAGI for single filers, and $$ 140,000$ for MFJ. The deduction is allowed for both required and voluntary prepaid interest payments.Has your employer provided repayment for your student loans through a qualified educational assistance program? If so, under the CAA of 2021 , up to $$ 5,250$ of such benefits can be excluded from your income each year (through 2025).

Have any of your student loans been discharged, in whole or in part? If so, per the American Rescue Plan of 2021, the discharge of student debt (federally-backed or private) in 2021 through 2025 is excluded from income at the federal level.

Are your payments tied to your AGI (e.g. an IDR loan)? If so, consider the following:

- If you are married, note how your household income and tax filing status could affect your monthly payments. Compare your joint tax liability under MFS and MFJ, and choose the most favorable method.
- Implement strategies to reduce your AGI, such as making tax-deductible contributions to your retirement plan(s), FSA, and/or HSA.

A Message from our Founder, Amy Irvine, CFP®, EA, MPAS®, CCFC

I started Rooted Planning Group out of frustration, because I really wanted to help clients build their wealth in a "different" way than the traditional wealth management firm. We are an all-female, ensemble fee-only financial planning firm, and I established our firm to always act as a fiduciary. Our services include cash flow analysis, goal planning, debt reduction and planning, student loan planning, tax planning (and preparation), education planning, investment planning, employee benefits, and risk planning.

We typically work with professional women and couples who fall in the Gen-Y, Gen-X or late-stage baby boomer age range. A fair number of our clients are lawyers, engineers, and small business owners.

It is our greatest desire to help other women feel empowered about their finances. We strive to help people grow their wealth, which sometimes means we start in the negative, with the goal of growing to the positive.
